

The image features a vibrant, abstract composition on a black background. Several colorful, worm-like or ribbon-like shapes are arranged in a dynamic, swirling pattern. These shapes include a red and black striped spiral, a bright orange segmented worm, a yellow segmented worm, and a pink segmented worm. A pink heart shape is integrated into the design, appearing as a small heart within a pink worm-like structure and as a larger outline in the bottom right corner. The background is decorated with various pink and red decorative elements, including spirals, floral motifs, and a large, faint circular shape. The overall aesthetic is modern and artistic.

FEELINGS EDITORIAL

What would human beings be like without feelings? Perhaps we would be like computers, or automatic and instinctive creatures like insects.

Feelings are that human quality which produces both good and bad emotions. We all know from our own experience what love and anger are, as well as affection or fear, desire or hope; and these emotions motivate us to act in different ways.

No human being displays the same intensity of feeling when exposed to the same stimuli, and these differences are what make us unique.

Good feelings lead us to do the right thing and they must be encouraged. Our feelings make us aware of the life we are living.

Many people channel their feelings through their creativity, producing sculpture, painting, film, design, songs and all the other expressions of what we call art. In such works we can see embodied certain human dimensions that it would be hard to understand in any other way.

Revolutionart invites you to explore the origins of your feelings, the root of your emotions and the trigger that activates every one of your human fibers.
Welcome to a new edition!

The idea was to design a character that can imprint itself indelibly in our consciousness. A human narration of an emotional trip created out of real world and the boundless visual journeys of the mind shot for each beat, while reflecting the style and viewpoint of its creator.
